XXIII IFPS INTERNATIONAL FORUM

BERGAMO
23 - 26 OCTOBER 2024

Psychoanalysis faces the challenges of postmodern society:
new settings, models and perspectives to navigate complexity

Never before have we witnessed such a constant mutation of society and the paradigms to which we were used to: between wars, climatic and social emergencies, global pandemics, it seems to be increasingly difficult to define one's own identity and to find adequate affective, cognitive and relational tools to meet the other in a satisfactory and non-conflictual way.

In this context, psychoanalysis can and must play a central role both as a clinical tool capable of taking care of the different forms of psychic and existential suffering both as a "reflective function" in the infinite complexity of social phenomena, and as a model of a "being in the world" which is ethically and scientifically grounded.

New settings

- Different settings for different patients (online, prison, institution, disability, organic disease)
- Fluid identity, navigating between gender, sex and identity
- Social media, social hyperactivity and isolation

Theoretical models between practice and ethics

Dynamic constructs and endless training

- State of the art of research
- What training for future analysts?
- Deficit and conflict: a desirable clinical and conceptual review
- The primacy of the word, the role of the body

The conflict within and without

The disintegrated society

- Eros and Thanatos: an endless dance
- Splitting and dissociation, trauma and conflict within and without the individual
- Beauty will save the world, who will save beauty? Perhaps psychoanalysis

A psychoanalysis for every season

- His Majesty the Child
- Forever teenagers
- Growing old without limits

Body/brain/mind

- Which unconscious
- Imagine, feel, think
- Prolegomena to any future metapsychology

With the contribution of the entire IFPS, we imagine an event able to constitute itself as an intermediate area of encounter and sharing of common experiences, an ideal bridge between our various clinical and theoretical approaches, meanwhile allowing us, to look beyond. We are certain that the encounter and the "contamination" are creative necessary conditions to the vitality of Psychoanalysis in the contemporary world.
